Step 3

Step 4

Complete the TSA clearance process

The TSA clearance could take up to 120 days to perform the background check on an applicant who would like to obtain a hazardous materials endorsement on their CDL. The process is outlined and can be found at: <https://tsaenrollmentbyidemia.tsa.dhs.gov/programs/hme>

Steps to Obtain a Hazardous Materials Endorsement

Step 1Step 2Step 3Step 4

Obtain a Medical Examiners Certificate

Just like the TSA clearance, you will need to possess or schedule an appointment for a Medical Examiners Certificate. Your employer can assist you with this process as well as provide the steps to enroll you in The Clearinghouse.

Step 3

Step 4

Contact your State Department of Motor Vehicle to ensure all information has been received

To ensure you have completed all the necessary steps:

- + Contact your State department of motor vehicles to see if your TSA clearance and scores for HME training are in the registry.

If you have an existing CDL B or A license, you will only need to take your written exam for the HazMat Endorsement. If you are obtaining a new CDL with a CDL-C rating, you will be required to first take the CDL General Knowledge Test prior to your HazMat Endorsement Test. Note: There is no Entry Level Driver Training required (in most states) for obtaining a CDL-C license. However, some states may require additional training and require a "walk-around or pre-trip inspection" - including a road test to ensure your ability to control your commercial motor vehicle.
